NOTESOperator (Multi-Purpose)

Definition: A multi-purpose operator is an employee who is certified to operate three (3) or more different types of equipment.

General:

1. An operator who has been certified in the operation of a particular machine will be eligible to receive the published rate of pay for that occupation only when a position is available.
2. An operator may be certified at any time by a Training Officer or the operator's Supervisor (if qualified). A minimum number of hours of operation on a machine type, according to common industry practice, will normally be required before an operator will be certified. Such hours of experience are not necessarily accumulated while in the employ of Nuna Contracting related companies.
3. Both a training officer and immediate supervisor must sign the certification document.
4. The effective date for position changes would be the date that the person moves into that position. It could fall anywhere in their rotation or pay period.

Signed at Yellowknife, Northwest Territories, this 1st day of October, 2018.
